

6-20-1957

Bulloch Times (Statesboro News-Statesboro Eagle)

Notes

Condition varies. Some pages missing or in poor condition.

Originals provided for filming by the publisher.

Gift of Statesboro Herald and the Bulloch County Historical Society.

Follow this and additional works at: <https://digitalcommons.georgiasouthern.edu/bulloch-news-issues>

Recommended Citation

"Bulloch Times (Statesboro News-Statesboro Eagle)" (1957). Bulloch County Newspapers (Single Issues). 2906.
<https://digitalcommons.georgiasouthern.edu/bulloch-news-issues/2906>

This newspaper is brought to you for free and open access by the Bulloch County Historical Newspapers at Digital Commons@Georgia Southern. It has been accepted for inclusion in Bulloch County Newspapers (Single Issues) by an authorized administrator of Digital Commons@Georgia Southern. For more information, please contact digitalcommons@georgiasouthern.edu.

Civil Defense In Clearing Up Debris

By Max Lockwood
Director, Statesboro and
Bulloch County

The engineering service would restore damaged facilities and clear away debris after an attack. It would be to help a stricken city back into working order as possible.

Members of the engineering service would include persons with experience in building trades, utilities, or the construction industry. The engineering service seeks first of all to enlist white organizations in the clearing up of debris.

Local civil defense will use existing engineering groups in the clearing up of debris. It would be to help a stricken city back into working order as possible.

Men are needed who know how to operate special equipment, such as cranes, bulldozers, dump trucks and welding machines. In addition there will be need for volunteers in the labor force that would help clear away wreckage and open the streets to traffic.

Extra help will be recruited from equipment and material dealers, labor unions, engineering schools and other groups that have skilled workmen, tools and materials. If you have experience in the construction engineering or in the labor force that would help clear away wreckage and open the streets to traffic.

I wish that Gabriel Heatter would get well, so he wouldn't have to keep taking the remedial ads for his insomnia, body pains, and headaches.

BUYING! SELLING! RENTING! SWAPPING!

YOU'LL FIND THE

READ AND USE WANT ADS FOR QUICK RESULTS, IT'S THE TOWN'S BIGGEST MARKET PLACE

BULLOCH TIMES

READ AND USE WANT ADS FOR QUICK RESULTS, IT'S THE TOWN'S BIGGEST MARKET PLACE

BULLOCH TIMES

Dr. Hubert King Attends Meeting

Dr. Hubert King, Medical Director of the District 7, Health Department, attended the meeting of the Public Health Medical Directors in Macon last week.

At this meeting the Georgia Association of Local Public Health Physicians was organized. Dr. King was appointed chairman of the committee on constitution and by-laws. Serving on this committee with Dr. King are: Dr. W. D. Longquist, Savannah; Dr. Robert Walker, Macon; and Dr. F. O. Pearson, Regional Medical Director, Macon. Dr. A. J. Davis of Augusta is president of this new organization.

The purpose of this organization will be to promote the health of citizens of Georgia and assist in coordinating all public health programs in the state.

Farewell Supper Honors Pastor

The Hubert-Edwards Methodist Church of Stilton, met with Mr. and Mrs. Hoke Hayes in their lovely new home Tuesday evening honoring Rev. and Mrs. Guy Parish with a farewell supper party in appreciation of his four year pastorate of the church.

The new pastor, Rev. Leroy Hendrix of Hubert-Edwards Church, preached his first sermon Sunday morning. He succeeds Rev. Guy Parish, who was transferred to Richmond.

Mrs. James Davis presented a Fathers' Day program Sunday morning. Mr. L. Miller, Sr., was presented a gift for being the oldest father present.

TAYLOR REUNION HELD
SUNDAY, JUNE 16

The second annual reunion of the Taylor-Edwards Church of Stilton, held at Poplar Springs Baptist Church, Sunday, June 16, with about 100 relatives and friends attending. Officers elected for the coming year were: President, Colin Taylor; Secretary, William Taylor; Treasurer, Harold Taylor; and Warden, Harold Taylor.

Patronize Our Advertisers

Preston Is Opposed To Present Bill

Congressman Prince H. Preston denounced in ringing terms the House of Representatives bill now before the House of Representatives and called on his colleagues to defeat the measure which "substitutes justice by injunction for the precious right of trial by jury."

Preston said that Nikita Khrushchev's recent prediction on a television program that our grand children would live under a government of communist socialism led to the conclusion that "the attitude toward the Kremlin see in this iniquitous Civil Rights bill an enormous stride in the United States toward the state slave order which the oppressed people of Russia now exist."

"Khrushchev's optimism about the adoption in this country of the Russian mode of government by tyranny is further explained when it is considered that this Police State legislation is not sponsored by a subversive group or organization, but by the President of the United States and the Republican administration which he heads," Preston declared.

"You men and women of this Congress know full well that the enforcement of the sweeping provisions of this so-called Civil Rights bill will require a horde of bureaucrats and Federal police to ferret out every imaginary infraction of this proposed law," Preston continued. "Under whatever name this force may be designated, the functions will inevitably be that of secret police."

"If Speaker, by this legislation we are inviting, if not demanding, the establishment of an American Gestapo to spy and snoop and terrorize American citizens in every village and hamlet in the 48 states of this Union," the First District Representative exclaimed.

In denouncing the defense of the United States Constitution and Civil Rights measure, Preston warned the Congress in these words, "I say to you that we face today the most serious crisis in the history of this nation. The Republic is being destroyed by the hands of the traitors who are in the White House and in the Congress."

Next Friday Statesboro will be host to Swainsboro and game time will be 3 p. m.

In the Little League play on Friday, June 14, A. J. Youngman, Jr., son of Rev. A. J. Youngman, Sr., put the Lions way out front by picking a one-run, no hit, no error game.

The first right hander for the Lions struck out twelve batters and walked only one. The score in the game was 10 to 0. Youngman was backed up by a very fine fielding team. The losing pitcher was Jimmie Kirksey.

On Thursday at 3:30 the Statesboro Legion baseball team will play; Legion 135 in Savannah.

The schedule in the Little League Friday through Monday is as follows:

Friday: Jaycees vs. Lions, Rotary vs. Legion.

Saturday: Jaycees vs. Legion, Lions vs. Rotary.

On Thursday at 3:30 the Statesboro Legion baseball team will play; Legion 135 in Savannah.

The schedule in the Little League Friday through Monday is as follows:

Friday: Jaycees vs. Lions, Rotary vs. Legion.

Saturday: Jaycees vs. Legion, Lions vs. Rotary.

On Thursday at 3:30 the Statesboro Legion baseball team will play; Legion 135 in Savannah.

The schedule in the Little League Friday through Monday is as follows:

Friday: Jaycees vs. Lions, Rotary vs. Legion.

Saturday: Jaycees vs. Legion, Lions vs. Rotary.

On Thursday at 3:30 the Statesboro Legion baseball team will play; Legion 135 in Savannah.

The schedule in the Little League Friday through Monday is as follows:

THAT'S A FACT

FORGOTTEN HERO
HE WAS KNOWN TO HIS
COUNTRYMEN AS A
COMBATANT AND THE WORLD'S MOST FAMOUS
THE SOUTH SEAS
ISLANDS

SCARED WELL
THREE YEARS AGO
HE WAS KNOWN TO HIS
COUNTRYMEN AS A
COMBATANT AND THE WORLD'S MOST FAMOUS
THE SOUTH SEAS
ISLANDS

YOUR INVESTMENT PAYS OFF
WHEN YOU BUY A SHARE OF
THE BULLOCH COUNTY
FARMERS' CO-OP
THE BULLOCH COUNTY
FARMERS' CO-OP

and disunity of this nation in a manner that the Communist party could never accomplish alone and unaided."

Sports At Recreation Center

The Junior boys' team lost a very close ball game to a fine Junior group from Sylvana last Friday by a score of 9 to 8. Roy Kennedy, a fine left hander, was the star of the game.

The boys from Statesboro were backed up by good fielding. The boys from Statesboro were backed up by good fielding.

Next Friday Statesboro will be host to Swainsboro and game time will be 3 p. m.

In the Little League play on Friday, June 14, A. J. Youngman, Jr., son of Rev. A. J. Youngman, Sr., put the Lions way out front by picking a one-run, no hit, no error game.

The first right hander for the Lions struck out twelve batters and walked only one. The score in the game was 10 to 0. Youngman was backed up by a very fine fielding team.

On Thursday at 3:30 the Statesboro Legion baseball team will play; Legion 135 in Savannah.

The schedule in the Little League Friday through Monday is as follows:

Friday: Jaycees vs. Lions, Rotary vs. Legion.

Saturday: Jaycees vs. Legion, Lions vs. Rotary.

On Thursday at 3:30 the Statesboro Legion baseball team will play; Legion 135 in Savannah.

The schedule in the Little League Friday through Monday is as follows:

Friday: Jaycees vs. Lions, Rotary vs. Legion.

Saturday: Jaycees vs. Legion, Lions vs. Rotary.

On Thursday at 3:30 the Statesboro Legion baseball team will play; Legion 135 in Savannah.

The schedule in the Little League Friday through Monday is as follows:

Friday: Jaycees vs. Lions, Rotary vs. Legion.

Saturday: Jaycees vs. Legion, Lions vs. Rotary.

The First Governor Of Georgia

Bulloch County has produced many great men for whom she can justly be proud. But few can lay claim to a keener interest in their background and of the historical facts connected with the early days of Georgia's illustrious history and of Bulloch County's role in that period than J. E. McCracken, Jr.

Reared in Statesboro and the son of Mrs. J. E. McCracken and the late Mr. McCracken, J. E. is connected with the Department of Public Health of the State of Georgia and holds the position of Assistant Director of the Division of Epidemiology.

In a recent issue of the Sunday Magazine section of the Atlanta Journal, there was carried a story of Ebenezer church and of the early Salzburger, near Springfield, Mo. McCracken, pointed out by his proud Bulloch county heritage, has made an effort to "set the record straight." His letter, addressed to the editor of the Sunday Atlanta Journal-Constitution and made available to this paper, is reproduced below as one being of general interest to every Bulloch citizen.

"Like the pastor of Jerusalem Church at Ebenezer, 'We are thankful for this heritage' and deeply grateful for what the Salzburger have meant to Georgia. Nevertheless, John Adam Treutlen, great man though he was, was not the first chief executive of this state and should not be spoken of as its first governor. This state has been made several times recently in feature stories dealing with the Salzburger and colonial history."

"Archibald Bulloch accepted the personally dangerous and responsible executive task when the colony and the state most needed respect, respect and established men as leaders. It has been said that for the determination shown by Archibald Bulloch, Noble W. Jones, John Houston and George Walton, Georgia would not have been so great a state. Without them, the timorous and the conservative would have prevailed over the friends of the Revolution and the revolutionary sentiment."

"It is true that Archibald Bulloch was never governor because his office was first entitled 'president' and later 'governor.' The terminology first used and abandoned immediately probably implied merely that 'governor' was a title not yet established in Georgia to hold the State firm in the Revolution. As the Revolution came, the title was changed to 'governor' and was publicly accepted in 1777."

"The internal evidence that Bulloch stood first with his contemporaries is strong. Only the names Benjamin Franklin and John Hancock precede Bulloch's in the list of civil leaders of the Revolution for whom counties were named in Georgia. Bulloch County was created on February 8, 1776 to encompass an enormous area which had been briefly served and Bryan (1773-1796) and before that the Phillips Parish and then the Archibald Bulloch who was not afraid to stand first, wherever might stand after."

"On July 14th, 1775, the Second Provincial Congress met, attended by more than 100 delegates from every parish in the colony. . . . After the election of Archibald Bulloch as president and George Walton as president, they adjourned from Townsboro, Tavern to the Meeting House."

"On April 15, 1776, this Revolutionary government adopted the first written fundamental document ever made for this state. This another definite step was taken to consolidate Revolutionary government in Georgia and to lead farther away from England. The Provincial Congress elected Bulloch, who had been president of the two previous congresses, the first president and Commander-in-Chief."

"President Bulloch died (1777) and to fill the vacancy the office of safety designated Button Gwinnett. . . . Then falling in his expedition he (Gwinnett) sought next to be elected governor under the new constitution but the assembly decided on John Adam Treutlen, a patriotic Salzburger. In January 1778, John Houston was elected Governor. . . ."

"The people of Bulloch County who have had their eyes fixed so firmly upon the future and as little upon the past as any there be, have perhaps for that reason, borne the name of an able and resolute patriot with honor to themselves and to their sponsor. Nevertheless, they ought not to let Georgians forget who stood first when standing first could mean only a first step to hang."

"They ought not to let others forget that it was Archibald Bulloch who read the Declaration of Independence to the people of Savannah, a Declaration which he would have been a sign that he was not in Georgia to hold the State firm in the Revolution. As the Revolution came, the title was changed to 'governor' and was publicly accepted in 1777."

"The internal evidence that Bulloch stood first with his contemporaries is strong. Only the names Benjamin Franklin and John Hancock precede Bulloch's in the list of civil leaders of the Revolution for whom counties were named in Georgia. Bulloch County was created on February 8, 1776 to encompass an enormous area which had been briefly served and Bryan (1773-1796) and before that the Phillips Parish and then the Archibald Bulloch who was not afraid to stand first, wherever might stand after."

"On July 14th, 1775, the Second Provincial Congress met, attended by more than 100 delegates from every parish in the colony. . . . After the election of Archibald Bulloch as president and George Walton as president, they adjourned from Townsboro, Tavern to the Meeting House."

"On April 15, 1776, this Revolutionary government adopted the first written fundamental document ever made for this state. This another definite step was taken to consolidate Revolutionary government in Georgia and to lead farther away from England. The Provincial Congress elected Bulloch, who had been president of the two previous congresses, the first president and Commander-in-Chief."

"President Bulloch died (1777) and to fill the vacancy the office of safety designated Button Gwinnett. . . . Then falling in his expedition he (Gwinnett) sought next to be elected governor under the new constitution but the assembly decided on John Adam Treutlen, a patriotic Salzburger. In January 1778, John Houston was elected Governor. . . ."

"The people of Bulloch County who have had their eyes fixed so firmly upon the future and as little upon the past as any there be, have perhaps for that reason, borne the name of an able and resolute patriot with honor to themselves and to their sponsor. Nevertheless, they ought not to let Georgians forget who stood first when standing first could mean only a first step to hang."

"They ought not to let others forget that it was Archibald Bulloch who read the Declaration of Independence to the people of Savannah, a Declaration which he would have been a sign that he was not in Georgia to hold the State firm in the Revolution. As the Revolution came, the title was changed to 'governor' and was publicly accepted in 1777."

BULLOCH TIMES

Thursday, June 20, 1957 Eight

Col. Rushing, coincides with the tobacco market season, it would be by no means amiss for the County of Bulloch to pause on that busy day to hear the Declaration of Independence read from the balcony of the Courthouse in Statesboro and to give credit where credit is due.

The following quotations from E. Merton Coulter's 'Georgia, A Short History' deal with the question of election. The 1776 rules and regulations of the Provincial Congress provided that the governor was to be elected for a term of one year and was ineligible to succeed himself for two years. Bulloch and later Treutlen and Houston were elected under these provisions and to precisely the same office by whatever name it came to be called.

"On July 14th, 1775, the Second Provincial Congress met, attended by more than 100 delegates from every parish in the colony. . . . After the election of Archibald Bulloch as president and George Walton as president, they adjourned from Townsboro, Tavern to the Meeting House."

LOCAL REPRESENTATIVE MILTON W. TURNER PO 43102 STATESBORO, GA.

FREE PARKING Air Conditioned

U. S. CHOICE HEAVY BEEF ROUND STEAK 1 lb. 69c

ROBBINS HICKORY SMOKED HAMS-Whole or Half 1 lb. 55c

LAUREL SLICED BACON 1 lb. 49c

SUPERFINE VEGETABLES 303 CAN 25c

Tiny Tender Peas 25c

Fancy Whole Onions 29c

Fancy Lima Grands 17c

Small Butter Beans 25c

Tomatoes With Okra 23c

Mixed Vegetables 19c

HUNT'S CATSUP 14-oz. 2 btl. 35c

FILBERT'S MAYONNAISE quart 59c

ALL SOUTHERN OLEO 1 lb. 19c

SUGAR ROSE TOMATOES 303 can 10c

QUANTITY RIGHTS RESERVED

BULLOCH TIMES

Thursday, June 20, 1957 Eight

Col. Rushing, coincides with the tobacco market season, it would be by no means amiss for the County of Bulloch to pause on that busy day to hear the Declaration of Independence read from the balcony of the Courthouse in Statesboro and to give credit where credit is due.

The following quotations from E. Merton Coulter's 'Georgia, A Short History' deal with the question of election. The 1776 rules and regulations of the Provincial Congress provided that the governor was to be elected for a term of one year and was ineligible to succeed himself for two years. Bulloch and later Treutlen and Houston were elected under these provisions and to precisely the same office by whatever name it came to be called.

"On July 14th, 1775, the Second Provincial Congress met, attended by more than 100 delegates from every parish in the colony. . . . After the election of Archibald Bulloch as president and George Walton as president, they adjourned from Townsboro, Tavern to the Meeting House."

"On April 15, 1776, this Revolutionary government adopted the first written fundamental document ever made for this state. This another definite step was taken to consolidate Revolutionary government in Georgia and to lead farther away from England. The Provincial Congress elected Bulloch, who had been president of the two previous congresses, the first president and Commander-in-Chief."

"President Bulloch died (1777) and to fill the vacancy the office of safety designated Button Gwinnett. . . . Then falling in his expedition he (Gwinnett) sought next to be elected governor under the new constitution but the assembly decided on John Adam Treutlen, a patriotic Salzburger. In January 1778, John Houston was elected Governor. . . ."

"The people of Bulloch County who have had their eyes fixed so firmly upon the future and as little upon the past as any there be, have perhaps for that reason, borne the name of an able and resolute patriot with honor to themselves and to their sponsor. Nevertheless, they ought not to let Georgians forget who stood first when standing first could mean only a first step to hang."

"They ought not to let others forget that it was Archibald Bulloch who read the Declaration of Independence to the people of Savannah, a Declaration which he would have been a sign that he was not in Georgia to hold the State firm in the Revolution. As the Revolution came, the title was changed to 'governor' and was publicly accepted in 1777."

"The internal evidence that Bulloch stood first with his contemporaries is strong. Only the names Benjamin Franklin and John Hancock precede Bulloch's in the list of civil leaders of the Revolution for whom counties were named in Georgia. Bulloch County was created on February 8, 1776 to encompass an enormous area which had been briefly served and Bryan (1773-1796) and before that the Phillips Parish and then the Archibald Bulloch who was not afraid to stand first, wherever might stand after."

"On July 14th, 1775, the Second Provincial Congress met, attended by more than 100 delegates from every parish in the colony. . . . After the election of Archibald Bulloch as president and George Walton as president, they adjourned from Townsboro, Tavern to the Meeting House."

"On April 15, 1776, this Revolutionary government adopted the first written fundamental document ever made for this state. This another definite step was taken to consolidate Revolutionary government in Georgia and to lead farther away from England. The Provincial Congress elected Bulloch, who had been president of the two previous congresses, the first president and Commander-in-Chief."

"President Bulloch died (1777) and to fill the vacancy the office of safety designated Button Gwinnett. . . . Then falling in his expedition he (Gwinnett) sought next to be elected governor under the new constitution but the assembly decided on John Adam Treutlen, a patriotic Salzburger. In January 1778, John Houston was elected Governor. . . ."

"The people of Bulloch County who have had their eyes fixed so firmly upon the future and as little upon the past as any there be, have perhaps for that reason, borne the name of an able and resolute patriot with honor to themselves and to their sponsor. Nevertheless, they ought not to let Georgians forget who stood first when standing first could mean only a first step to hang."

"They ought not to let others forget that it was Archibald Bulloch who read the Declaration of Independence to the people of Savannah, a Declaration which he would have been a sign that he was not in Georgia to hold the State firm in the Revolution. As the Revolution came, the title was changed to 'governor' and was publicly accepted in 1777."

"The internal evidence that Bulloch stood first with his contemporaries is strong. Only the names Benjamin Franklin and John Hancock precede Bulloch's in the list of civil leaders of the Revolution for whom counties were named in Georgia. Bulloch County was created on February 8, 1776 to encompass an enormous area which had been briefly served and Bryan (1773-1796) and before that the Phillips Parish and then the Archibald Bulloch who was not afraid to stand first, wherever might stand after."

"On July 14th, 1775, the Second Provincial Congress met, attended by more than 100 delegates from every parish in the colony. . . . After the election of Archibald Bulloch as president and George Walton as president, they adjourned from Townsboro, Tavern to the Meeting House."

"On April 15, 1776, this Revolutionary government adopted the first written fundamental document ever made for this state. This another definite step was taken to consolidate Revolutionary government in Georgia and to lead farther away from England. The Provincial Congress elected Bulloch, who had been president of the two previous congresses, the first president and Commander-in-Chief."

"President Bulloch died (1777) and to fill the vacancy the office of safety designated Button Gwinnett. . . . Then falling in his expedition he (Gwinnett) sought next to be elected governor under the new constitution but the assembly decided on John Adam Treutlen, a patriotic Salzburger. In January 1778, John Houston was elected Governor. . . ."

"The people of Bulloch County who have had their eyes fixed so firmly upon the future and as little upon the past as any there be, have perhaps for that reason, borne the name of an able and resolute patriot with honor to themselves and to their sponsor. Nevertheless, they ought not to let Georgians forget who stood first when standing first could mean only a first step to hang."

"They ought not to let others forget that it was Archibald Bulloch who read the Declaration of Independence to the people of Savannah, a Declaration which he would have been a sign that he was not in Georgia to hold the State firm in the Revolution. As the Revolution came, the title was changed to 'governor' and was publicly accepted in 1777."

BULLOCH TIMES

Thursday, June 20, 1957 Eight

Col. Rushing, coincides with the tobacco market season, it would be by no means amiss for the County of Bulloch to pause on that busy day to hear the Declaration of Independence read from the balcony of the Courthouse in Statesboro and to give credit where credit is due.

The following quotations from E. Merton Coulter's 'Georgia, A Short History' deal with the question of election. The 1776 rules and regulations of the Provincial Congress provided that the governor was to be elected for a term of one year and was ineligible to succeed himself for two years. Bulloch and later Treutlen and Houston were elected under these provisions and to precisely the same office by whatever name it came to be called.

"On July 14th, 1775, the Second Provincial Congress met, attended by more than 100 delegates from every parish in the colony. . . . After the election of Archibald Bulloch as president and George Walton as president, they adjourned from Townsboro, Tavern to the Meeting House."

"On April 15, 1776, this Revolutionary government adopted the first written fundamental document ever made for this state. This another definite step was taken to consolidate Revolutionary government in Georgia and to lead farther away from England. The Provincial Congress elected Bulloch, who had been president of the two previous congresses, the first president and Commander-in-Chief."

"President Bulloch died (1777) and to fill the vacancy the office of safety designated Button Gwinnett. . . . Then falling in his expedition he (Gwinnett) sought next to be elected governor under the new constitution but the assembly decided on John Adam Treutlen, a patriotic Salzburger. In January 1778, John Houston was elected Governor. . . ."

"The people of Bulloch County who have had their eyes fixed so firmly upon the future and as little upon the past as any there be, have perhaps for that reason, borne the name of an able and resolute patriot with honor to themselves and to their sponsor. Nevertheless, they ought not to let Georgians forget who stood first when standing first could mean only a first step to hang."

"They ought not to let others forget that it was Archibald Bulloch who read the Declaration of Independence to the people of Savannah, a Declaration which he would have been a sign that he was not in Georgia to hold the State firm in the Revolution. As the Revolution came, the title was changed to 'governor' and was publicly accepted in 1777."

"The internal evidence that Bulloch stood first with his contemporaries is strong. Only the names Benjamin Franklin and John Hancock precede Bulloch's in the list of civil leaders of the Revolution for whom counties were named in Georgia. Bulloch County was created on February 8, 1776 to encompass an enormous area which had been briefly served and Bryan (1773-1796) and before that the Phillips Parish and then the Archibald Bulloch who was not afraid to stand first, wherever might stand after."

"On July 14th, 1775, the Second Provincial Congress met, attended by more than 100 delegates from every parish in the colony. . . . After the election of Archibald Bulloch as president and George Walton as president, they adjourned from Townsboro, Tavern to the Meeting House."

"On April 15, 1776, this Revolutionary government adopted the first written fundamental document ever made for this state. This another definite step was taken to consolidate Revolutionary government in Georgia and to lead farther away from England. The Provincial Congress elected Bulloch, who had been president of the two previous congresses, the first president and Commander-in-Chief."

"President Bulloch died (1777) and to fill the vacancy the office of safety designated Button Gwinnett. . . . Then falling in his expedition he (Gwinnett) sought next to be elected governor under the new constitution but the assembly decided on John Adam Treutlen, a patriotic Salzburger. In January 1778, John Houston was elected Governor. . . ."

"The people of Bulloch County who have had their eyes fixed so firmly upon the future and as little upon the past as any there be, have perhaps for that reason, borne the name of an able and resolute patriot with honor to themselves and to their sponsor. Nevertheless, they ought not to let Georgians forget who stood first when standing first could mean only a first step to hang."

"They ought not to let others forget that it was Archibald Bulloch who read the Declaration of Independence to the people of Savannah, a Declaration which he would have been a sign that he was not in Georgia to hold the State firm in the Revolution. As the Revolution came, the title was changed to 'governor' and was publicly accepted in 1777."

"The internal evidence that Bulloch stood first with his contemporaries is strong. Only the names Benjamin Franklin and John Hancock precede Bulloch's in the list of civil leaders of the Revolution for whom counties were named in Georgia. Bulloch County was created on February 8, 1776 to encompass an enormous area which had been briefly served and Bryan (1773-1796) and before that the Phillips Parish and then the Archibald Bulloch who was not afraid to stand first, wherever might stand after."

"On July 14th, 1775, the Second Provincial Congress met, attended by more than 100 delegates from every parish in the colony. . . . After the election of Archibald Bulloch as president and George Walton as president, they adjourned from Townsboro, Tavern to the Meeting House."

"On April 15, 1776, this Revolutionary government adopted the first written fundamental document ever made for this state. This another definite step was taken to consolidate Revolutionary government in Georgia and to lead farther away from England. The Provincial Congress elected Bulloch, who had been president of the two previous congresses, the first president and Commander-in-Chief."

"President Bulloch died (1777) and to fill the vacancy the office of safety designated Button Gwinnett. . . . Then falling in his expedition he (Gwinnett) sought next to be elected governor under the new constitution but the assembly decided on John Adam Treutlen, a patriotic Salzburger. In January 1778, John Houston was elected Governor. . . ."

"The people of Bulloch County who have had their eyes fixed so firmly upon the future and as little upon the past as any there be, have perhaps for that reason, borne the name of an able and resolute patriot with honor to themselves and to their sponsor. Nevertheless, they ought not to let Georgians forget who stood first when standing first could mean only a first step to hang."

"They ought not to let others forget that it was Archibald Bulloch who read the Declaration of Independence to the people of Savannah, a Declaration which he would have been a sign that he was not in Georgia to hold the State firm in the Revolution. As the Revolution came, the title was changed to 'governor' and was publicly accepted in 1777."

BULLOCH TIMES

Thursday, June 20, 1957 Eight

Col. Rushing, coincides with the tobacco market season, it would be by no means amiss for